U. S. May Draft Men For War Industries

THIRD LOTTERY INCREASES POOL TO 26,000,000

7,000 Order Numbers Set Up During Night In Colorful Ceremony

EARLY CALL IS HINTED

Hershey Indicates Need For Additional Workers In Vital Factories

WASHINGTON, March 18 — Launched with the disclosure that the national selective service system will be used to conscript workers for war industries, America's first draft lottery of World War No. 2, ended today after a 13-hour, all-night marathon during which approximately 7,000 order numbers for 9,000,000 men were drawn.

The lottery — the third held since the national defense program began in 1940, but the first wartime event of its kind since 1918 — started at 6 o'clock last night. The last number was drawn at 7:04 o'clock this morning.

It raised the pool of manpower for the armed forces and, if necessary, for conscription for war jobs in industry to 26,000,000 men. It also marked another step forward in the United States' mobilization of all of its men liable to military service. Unless the draft law is later broadened, all men of military age limit—20 to 44, inclusive—now have been assigned numbers telling them in what order they will be inducted into the Army if they are selected for actual combat duty.

Stimson Draws First

Secretary of War Stimson drew the first number from the gold-fish bowl that has been used for every draft. It was 3,485.

The last number drawn was 4. (Continued on Page Two)

LEE GRIFFITH OF AMANDA KILLED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Lee Griffith of Amanda, husband of the former Eileen Kirby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Kirby of Folsom avenue, died Tuesday night in a McKees Rocks, Pa., hospital of injuries suffered in a fall.

Mr. Griffith had been employed on a construction job for the last week.

Among survivors are his parents and some sisters and brothers.

More details about the accident were not available. His death was the second on the McKees Rocks construction job, Alfred Davis of Circleville being killed when a wall fell last January 5. Several other Circleville district men are working at McKees Rocks.

PAT DUNN TO RUN AGAIN

NEW PHILADELPHIA, March 18—Rep Patrick J. Dunn (D) Strasburg, today was a candidate for a sixth consecutive term as Tuscarawas county's member of the Ohio house of representatives. Dunn announced his candidacy on St. Patrick's Day, his own 66th birthday anniversary. If re-elected, he would be the oldest House Democrat from point of seniority.

C. D. Kraft Tops List In County

Ashville Banker Holder Of No. 411; Board To Prepare Official List

Claude D. Kraft, former Circleville resident who is now cashier for the Citizen's Banking company, Ashville, is the local holder of No. 411, fourth number drawn in Tuesday night's national lottery and the first number applicable to registrants of the Pick-away county draft board.

Because of dependents, Mr. Kraft is expected to receive a deferred status.

The second number called applicable to the local board was No. 1103, which is the number held by Fire Chief Talmer Wise who is now enroute to Pearl Harbor as a government ordnance worker.

No. 3 on the county list is No. 176, the number assigned to William Sollars of Mount Sterling.

Draft board officials will not be able to release a list of official order numbers until it receives the master list from Washington. The task of preparing the official list may require 10 days or longer.

In an effort to prevent confusion and error, The Daily Herald will not prepare a list as set up by the lottery, but will await release of the official order lineup by the draft board.

'Little Lottery' Follows First

WASHINGTON, March 18—One number was drawn twice and two other numbers were missing today when the national draft lottery ended, so a second "little lottery" was held.

At the end of the big drawing, it was found that only 6,998 numbers instead of a planned 7,000 had been drawn. However, one number, 2,885, was drawn twice and two other numbers, 2,069 and 6,342 were missing.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national draft director, after a checkup, announced that one of the two 2,885's should have been 2,385. As a result, it was then decided to draw the numbers 2,385, 2,069 and 6,342.

So the numbers were inserted in capsules and dropped into the goldfish bowl. They were drawn in the following order—6,342, 2,069 and 2,385. Those holding the three got a break since their numbers were at the bottom of the list.

The number 2,885 was drawn both as the 742nd and 1,638th numbers. Gen. Hershey ruled that the order number for those holding 2,885 would be the larger number, or 1,638, placing them some 900 numbers further down on the list.

DESERTER SAYS ARMY LIFE TOO MUCH EAT, SLEEP

UNIONVILLE, N. Y., March 18—William Stickle Jr., A.W.O.L. from Fort Dix since January 1, blamed his second desertion to the boredom of Army life when troops arrested him at his farm home. "All I did was eat and sleep," he said.

Stickle first deserted last summer after his induction.

Simultaneously with his arrest, New Jersey police charged him with stealing two automobile tires, he denied the charge.

Stickle was delivered to the provost marshal at West Point.

CIRCLEVILLE TO RECEIVE $238.98 IN ESTATE TAX

Circleville will receive $238.98 inheritance tax from the estate of the late Clara W. Baum. Total amount of the estate subject to tax was $5,879.42, according to probate court officials, and the tax will be paid by a sister and brother.

Williamsport will receive $437.54 inheritance tax from the estate of Mary A. Anderson. The amount of the estate subject to tax was $6,454.

"Gen MacArthur's appointment has been greeted with a chorus of approval in England," the commentator said.

CHUNGKING — The American volunteer group, based in southern Yunnan, bombed enemy trucks and troops on the bank of the Sitang river in Burma, it was announced in a communique today. The American airmen encountered five Japanese planes Sunday, shooting down one raider and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy's mechanized forces, the communique said. All the Americans returned safely to their base, it added.

MEXICO CITY—"The appointment of General MacArthur is a magnificent step. The defense of Australia falls into good hands for General MacArthur has proved himself to be a marvelous tactician," declared General Salvador Sanchez, chief-of-staff, speaking for President Camacho.

HAVANA — Cuba today issued a decree calling up certain classes and an unrevealed number of army and navy reservists to active service.

AUSTRALIA BANS MOTION PICTURES, SPORTS EVENTS

MELBOURNE, March 18—The Australian federal government today banned motion picture performances and sports meetings "during the present emergency." All theatres also were closed.

SENATORS WILL APPROVE HOUSE W. A. A. C. ACTION

WASHINGTON, March 18 — Senate leaders today predicted prompt and favorable action on the House approved bill creating the nation's first women's auxiliary army corps.

Sen. Lister Hill (D) Ala., sponsor of a similar measure, said that the upper chamber would vote favorably on the House bill just as soon as matters now being considered on the floor are concluded.

The Senate military affairs committee already has favorably reported the Hill proposal and it is likely that the House measure may be substituted for the Alabamian's bill. Hill said that he was sure the Senate would approve the bill "by a safe margin." On a roll-call vote of 249 to 86, the House approved the women's corps bill, after adopting an amendment to limit the size of the corps to 150,000 members.

MICHIGAN MAN SHOOT 'TOO ATTENTIVE' FRIEND

LAKE CITY, Mich., March 18—After reportedly confessing to the slaying of his old friend, who said he was too attentive to his wife, Elmer Plumber, 48-year-old farmer, was held by Lake City officers today.

Sheriff Merl Buckett said Plumber admitted shooting Thomas Becker, 46-year-old Pontiac auto worker, in the back twice as the latter left the Plumber home. Only explanation offered by Plumber, according to the sheriff, was that he was grief-stricken after Mrs. Plumber left him two weeks ago. He blamed the estrangement on Becker.

NEW DESTROYER READY TO BEGIN NAVAL SERVICE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18—One more destroyer was nearly ready to go into Navy service today.

The 1700-ton Frazier was launched yesterday at the Bethlehem shipyards, the fifth in a series being built there.

It was christened by Mrs. R. P. McCullough, wife of Capt. R. P. McCullough of the twelfth naval district and was named in honor of Seaman Daniel Frazier who sailed with Stephen Decatur in the pirate wars.

JUDGE'S HELP PROVIDES SOLDIERS WITH BRIDES

NEW YORK, March 18—Cupid had a judicial assist today to speed three young soldiers and their Chicago fiancées to the altar.

When the eager couples applied for their marriage licenses they were told they must wait 24 hours for the nuptials.

The soldiers gloomily saw their 24-hour furlough from Fort Hamilton going bride-less. A sympathetic bystander intervened with the tip that a supreme court justice had the power to waive the marriage law.

A few moments later, Justice Bernard L. Shientag heard their problem, signed the waiver and smilingly conferred his blessing.

When last seen the six were headed altar-ward.

The soldiers said they were Donald E. Norton, 22, of Chicago; Benjamin Ferris, 22, of Chicago; and Ernest Rowe, 23, of Port Arthur, Tex.

Jap Attack On Bataan Discloses American Unit Still There

By LEO V. DOLAN

INS War Editor

Australia has given Gen. Douglas MacArthur the welcome he wants—a new attack on the enemy.

Bombers of the United Nations air command winged northwestward from the Australian coastline to the island of Timor and smashed at the Japanese-occupied base at Koepang on the island's west coast.

The attack was carried out in the face of unfavorable weather and an attempt by Japanese fighter planes to break up the American Australian formations. Despite poor visibility, direct hits were scored on the Koepang air-drome—which means further disruption and delay in the enemy's plans to invade Australia.

Aside from this raid, however, there was little activity of note in the far Pacific. A similar situation prevailed in Burma although the Chinese troops on the British-Chinese left flank struck yesterday at Thai forces near Tong-tong and drove the enemy back.

In the Philippines, the Japs learned to their cost that MacArthur's departure does not mean (Continued on Page Two)

COURT OFFICIALS READY FOR GRAND JURY SESSION

All three men have confessed implication in a Gold Cliff filling station holdup on April 9, 1937.

Clerk of Courts A. L. Wilder said Mrs. L. M. Mader, Circleville, would serve on the grand jury in place of Mrs. Felix Caldwell, who had been excused.

Minister Hints Of Early Offensive By Allies

LONDON, March 18—Australia can be held against the largest-scale Japanese attack, General George H. Brett, deputy commander-in-chief under General Douglas MacArthur, announced today, according to a Reuter dispatch from Melbourne.

"All possible jumping-off points are being watched and the supply of aircraft is the maximum possible," he said.

SYDNEY, Australia, March 18—Prime Minister John Curtin, formally announcing that substantial American forces are in Australia, hinted broadly today at a forthcoming United Nations blow against Japan under the "inspiring" leadership of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

"We are the base from which to strike at the enemy," Curtin declared in his obvious reference to an impending offensive.

He said the American ground and air forces in the Australian commonwealth represent the spirit of fighting side by side that will give the democracies "decisive" military strength in the Far East.

At the same time all Australia—as did the entire British empire—jubilatedly hailed appointment of Gen. MacArthur, hero of Bataan, as supreme commander of United Nations forces in the southwestern Pacific.

Australian Army Minister Francis Forde welcomed MacArthur today following the arrival of the American military leader, his wife and child by plane.

Forde declared the government expects extensive fighting against the Japs on Australian territory and said Australian soldiers would be proud to work and fight under MacArthur, whose stand in the Philippines has aroused worldwide admiration.

The army minister stated the government believed no better choice could have been made for the post of supreme commander and added:

"We recognize him as a great soldier and inspiring leader."

The announcement was made today by the Navy department in a communique which stated the attack was conducted with a loss of only one airplane to the allied units. It aimed at the area near Salamaua and Lae and Huan gulf.

Filed simultaneously was announcement of the loss of two submarines and a destroyer in other areas. The Navy department related in its communique how its forces more than avenged Japan's naval success in the Java region.

The enemy vessels that were listed as "damaged and probably sunk" include six warships and five other destroyers.

Among these were two heavy cruisers, a light cruiser, a gunboat, a mine sweeper and five transports or cargo ships.

In addition, two destroyers were considered as "possibly" sunk.

LARGEST GORILLA DIES AT ZOO IN SAN DIEGO

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 18—An autopsy was to be performed today to determine cause of death of Mbongo, believed to be one of the largest gorillas in captivity.

The 620-pound gorilla was stricken with a strange malady several months ago. The famed animal died last night at the San Diego zoo which had been its home since 1930. Probable cause of death was soil poisoning, Zoo Curator Belle Benches reported.

Mbongo and his cage mate, Ngagi, were captured by the late Martin Johnson and his wife, Osa, in the Belgian Congo twelve years ago. The two animals were the reigning attractions at the zoo. The zoo curator said that $1,000,000 was offered for the pair at one time.

SOMEWHERE ON THE GERMAN FRONTIER, March 18—Reports that Japanese and Soviet troops are being mobilized on either side of the Siberia-Manchukuo frontier reached this border outpost today.

There were no details. (EDITOR'S NOTE: There have been frequent reports of Russian and Japanese troop movements and persistent rumors that Adolf Hitler has been demanding Japanese aid against Soviet Russia. No official dispatches from Moscow or Tokyo, however, have indicated any deterioration in Russo-Japanese relations. The countries now are bound by a neutrality pact.)

"Shark" Long Overdue And Presumed To Be Sunk In Pacific

WASHINGTON, March 18—Avenge losses at Java, American and Australian naval forces have conducted the most devastating raid of the war on Japanese sea units off the east coast of New Guinea, bagging 23 new enemy ships, all listed sunk or damaged, and downing three airplanes.

The announcement was made today by the Navy department in a communique which stated the attack was conducted with a loss of only one airplane to the allied units. It aimed at the area near Salamaua and Lae and Huan gulf.

Filed simultaneously was announcement of the loss of two submarines and a destroyer in other areas. The Navy department related in its communique how its forces more than avenged Japan's naval success in the Java region.

The enemy vessels that were listed as "damaged and probably sunk" include six warships and five other destroyers.

Among these were two heavy cruisers, a light cruiser, a gunboat, a mine sweeper and five transports or cargo ships.

In addition, two destroyers were considered as "possibly" sunk.

At the same time the Navy revealed that the U. S. submarine, Shark, a 1,315-ton ship launched May 3, 1935, has been overdue for more than a month and must be "presumed to be lost."

LARGEST GORILLA DIES AT ZOO IN SAN DIEGO

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 18—An autopsy was to be performed today to determine cause of death of Mbongo, believed to be one of the largest gorillas in captivity.

The 620-pound gorilla was stricken with a strange malady several months ago. The famed animal died last night at the San Diego zoo which had been its home since 1930. Probable cause of death was soil poisoning, Zoo Curator Belle Benchley reported.

Mbongo and his cage mate, Ngagi, were captured by the late Martin Johnson and his wife, Osa, in the Belgian Congo twelve years ago. The two animals were the reigning attractions at the zoo. The zoo curator said that $1,000,000 was offered for the pair at one time.

Parachutists Destroy Foe's Lines In Smolensk Area; Break-Through Vital

KHARKOV'S FALL NEAR

Red Assaults From Front And Rear Successful, Communique Says

STOCKHOLM, March 18 — Soviet troops have surrounded 200,000 Germans in a great pocket in the Vyazma-Rzhev area of the Moscow front, the newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported from Moscow today.

Russian parachutists dropped in the Smolensk area in a snowstorm destroyed several German fortified lines and continue to advance, the dispatch continued.

Soviet forces were said to have pierced the German lines toward the Vyazma highway and they are now under Russian fire. South of Orel in the Kursk district the Soviets repulsed enemy counter-attacks and occupied eight points, the Germans losing 1,000 men and 32 guns.

MOSCOW, March 18 — A new Russian break-through in which a Nazi center of resistance was smashed in a strategically important area by assaults from the front and rear was reported by the Tass news agency today.

(Editor's Note: The Russian agency did not state where the new Soviet attack occurred, but it may have been on the front outside Kharkov, great industrial center of the Donetz basin. Recent Soviet reports have indicated the Red army is expected to recapture Kharkov in the near future.)

Tass said a Soviet unit, combining frontal and rear attacks and aided by tanks, "smashed an enemy center of resistance covering the approaches to a strategically important area and captured five populated places."

Advance Continues

"The Soviets are continuing to advance after killing or wounding 1,250 Germans," the agency added. This report followed statements that the Nazi front defending Kharkov had been pierced and that Red army troops had won sensational new successes in the Staraya Russa area, where the German 16th army is caught in an ever-tightening trap.

A high command communique said Soviet units on one sector of the Kharkov front broke through the enemy's defenses on one sector and forced the Germans to withdraw. One thousand Nazis were "wiped out" in this battle at the gates of the great Donetz basin industrial center.

Military dispatches from the front said several thousand Germans were killed and 80 separate localities were recaptured during operations against the German 16th army around Staraya Russa in the last two weeks.

New successes also were announced on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow, where "several inhabited localities" were declared to have been occupied by Red army forces.

The regular midnight communique added that the Soviets had waged offensive operations and on front said several thousands German counter-attacks, inflicting "great losses" on the enemy.

THIRD LOTTERY INCREASES POOL TO 26,000,000

7,000 Order Numbers Set Up During Night In Colorful Ceremony

420. It was drawn by a sailor, Albert Carter of Albany, Ga.

By midnight, 3,000 capsules containing numbers had been drawn from the goldfish bowl that has been used for every lottery in modern day American history. But it was slow work and, with a total of 7,000 numbers to be drawn, the lottery went on into the morning hours.

Even before the drawing started, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national draft director, gave the nation's able-bodied men a hint of what might be in store for them—even if they cannot be used for military service.

"This is everyone's war," Hershey declared in a brief speech opening the lottery. "Each of us has a stake in it, each of us must do an essential job to win it. Nothing must hinder the systematic and orderly procurement and training of our armed forces."

Then Hershey made the startling statement:

"Nothing, not even the procurement of our armed forces, must interfere with the time table of production of the means by which the enemy will be defeated."

This meant that selective service officials would place production of planes and guns and tanks ahead of recruiting men for the armed forces. If necessary, it was learned, men will be drafted for such work.

"Men are selected to fly airplanes," Hershey said, "they may be selected to build airplanes."

"Men should be selected to man ships," he continued, "they should be selected to build ships."

By the lottery, he pointed out, millions of men were added to "that pool of men who stand ready for selection for the necessary tasks whatever they may be—selection to insure that democracy, our democracy, does not vanish from the earth."

After Hershey spoke, the tedious work of drawing the numbers started. At first, there was a splash of color as Secretary Stimson was blind-folded to draw the first number. The hall in which the drawing was held—the departmental auditorium near the Washington monument—was only partially filled.

The second number—2850—was drawn by Secretary of Navy Knox. Then other government dignitaries selected capsules. The first 10 numbers drawn were 3485, 2850, 4301, 441, 3743, 3417, 5298, 6724, 4618 and 4002.

Soldier Goes To Sleep

Then teams of uniformed soldiers, marines and sailors and veterans of World War I took over. After the first hour or so, spectators started to drift out of the hall, and at one time there were more police on hand than spectators. One soldier stretched himself out on the seats of chairs and went to sleep, apparently not much interested in the number drawings. He already had his uniform.

Later, women in formal evening dress, many of them escorted by high ranking officers in snappy uniforms, dropped in for a few minutes to watch the all night show.

Approximately 9,000,000 men were affected by the drawing. They were 20 year olds and men from 35 to 44, inclusive. They were in addition to the 17,000,000 men from 21 to 34, inclusive, who already have been classified.

Questionnaires Next

With the lottery out of the way, local draft boards prepared to mail questionnaires to the 9,000,000 new possible recruits. The questionnaires, are expected to be revised to ask for more information about what occupations reg-

PROBE OF NAZI SHIPS' FLIGHT REPORTED ENDED

LONDON, March 18—Britain's official investigation into the escape of the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen from Brest has been completed, but revealed no serious deficiencies in British defensive arrangements, an authoritative spokesman declared today.

The dash of the three German warships from Brest through the English channel to home ports of refuge aroused a terrific furore and outburst of criticism when it occurred several weeks ago.

The inquiry into how the three vessels managed to accomplish this feat was conducted by Sir Alfred Bucknill, judge probate of the divorce and admiralty division of the high court of justice.

A British spokesman said that Sir Alfred's report on the episode has been received by the government, but will not be published.

The government, however, will make every effort to profit from the facts and conclusions contained in Sir Alfred's findings, the spokesman said.

He added the general findings did not reveal any serious deficiencies either in foresight, cooperation or organization.

the loss of MacArthur's guidance. The Japs launched an assault yesterday—the first since March 8—on the American-Filipino lines but broke it off in a hurry when accurate American gunfire blasted at their advancing troops.

Military observers were quick to discount the ostensible lull in operations in the far Pacific. The successes achieved by American and Australian air fighters in their raids on the Japanese bases, flanking Australia undoubtedly have sheered off the enemy's plans for a lightning invasion stroke. But there seemed little doubt that those plans will be revised, and the assault launched, as soon as the enemy has reorganized his forces.

MacArthur's job appears twofold—first, to strengthen and distribute his forces to break up the attempted invasion, when and if it comes; second, to weld his men—there are all his men now, American and Australian, British and Dutch—into a powerful fighting machine that can take the offensive and regain the territory now in Japanese hands.

There is no dodging the fact that MacArthur has his job cut out for him, but there was confidence on all sides that he would carry out the greatest assignment given to an American general since Lincoln turned despairingly to Grant in the dark days of the Civil War.

Throughout the democratic world there were expressions of thanksgiving over MacArthur's appointment as supreme commander in the western Pacific. They came from statesmen and soldiers, from parliament and the press. But more significant than all these were two developments in the economic world where cold logic alone holds sway. In New York, the Stock Exchange strengthened greatly, and Australian bonds—the bonds that guarantee integrity and life of the Australian government—immediately advanced in value.

Real Estate And Utility Valuation $41,957,787 In Pickaway

Pickaway countians paid considerably more in real estate taxes during the first half collection this year than they did last year.

County Treasurer Robert Colville, who closed his real estate tax books last Saturday, said the first half collection amounted to $257,104.46. The amount is considerably larger than the collection for the same period last year, he said, partly because of the additional two mill school levy and partly because there are fewer delinquents.

The collection is one of the largest ever made, the treasurer said. Circleville's share of the collection will be about $65,000, that amount including the school's share.

Real estate and utility valuation in Pickaway county is $41,957,787. Utility valuation includes railroads and other public utilities in the county.

Next collection on real estate will begin in July.

WPA HALTED IN SOME COUNTIES TO AID FARMER

Although need for farm labor in Pickaway county is being stressed by rural leaders, a list of counties in which WPA will be suspended as soon as present projects are completed does not include Pickaway. The list was announced Tuesday by State WPA Administrator Carl Watson.

Watson said the action will be taken to free 1,200 workers in these counties for agricultural production, private industry and other phases of wartime endeavor. He said he felt certain that the small number of workers involved would be absorbed by private industry quickly.

The WPA chief hinted that the curtailment might soon extend to other counties. Consideration of similar action in other counties is to be given, he said, if the case load drops to a point where overhead costs increase disproportionately to the loss of manpower.

The suspension will remain in effect long enough to determine if the displaced workers can be absorbed in the war effort.

Counties included in the list suspending work are Ashland, Auglaize, Carroll, Champaign, Crawford, Darke, Delaware, Erie, Fulton, Hardin, Harrison, Holmes, Huron, Knox, Madison, Medina, Mercer, Miami, Morrow, Ottawa, Sandusky, Seneca, Shelby, Union, Wayne, Williams and Wyandot.

ELKS NAME OFFICERS, ADD FIVE TO ROSTER

Approximately 250 Elks enjoyed the dinner, served by Jimmy Carpenter and his crew.

Initiated during the evening were Tom Kirkpatrick of New Holland, Robert Norpoth, Edward Ebert Jr., and Dick Bremer of Circleville, and Guy Cline of Ashville.

Barton R. Deming, who has served as leading knight during the last year, was elected exalted ruler to succeed Tom A. Renick. Other officers elected for the next year were Dr. O. J. Towers, leading knight; Joe Burns, loyal knight; Sheldon Mader, lecturing knight; Leland Pontius, secretary; Clark Will, treasurer; Howard Ater, tiler; Charles H. ## Ashville is Lauded For Its Defense, Camp Plans

L. W. Reese of the federal security agency in the department of recreation spoke at Monday night's defense council meeting at the school auditorium to a large group of interested persons.

Mr. Reese emphasized the fact that this war is a civilian war as well as a war for the soldier and the sailor and urged persons to become more alert to this fact. He commended local authorities in the establishment of a recreation room in the Odd Fellows building to be used by workers at the nearby bombing field and brought out the importance of building morale by welcoming these workers to this community.

He explained that to offset vice which follows groups of workers in projects like this recreation of various sorts is very helpful. With his idea that a good way to fight sin is to offer something decent in its place, Mr. Reese believes that recreation—softball and other games, together with a lounging room and church programs—will do much to make a satisfactory adjustment in the various defense areas.

Reese expressed faith in the Ashville community to solve its problem as many other similar communities are doing by welcoming the workers and having things for them to do in their spare hours.

Introductory remarks were made by H. J. Bowers and after the main speech of the evening, Mayor Fred Hines took charge of the meeting and announced that a recreation committee has been appointed to work out plans for an intensive program of activity along that line. Those appointed were R. A. Carter, L. W. Fullen, E. Irwin, Helen Bowers, Geraldine Conrad and Elizabeth Cromley.

Remarks on civilian defense registration were made by Mrs. Bowen and Marguerite Hoover and they suggested that the enrollment be completed in the very near future. One may enroll for this volunteer work by filling out a registration card supplied by the above mentioned persons.

Other remarks were made by C. E. Mahaffey regarding salvage and Ed Schlegel on the subject of first aid. The salvage committee will be making a collection next Saturday and boxes of paper, rags, iron should be placed near the streets in front of the houses to facilitate the work.

Several courses of instruction and training for the various phases of defense work are to be held very soon and Mr. Hines requested that a number of persons volunteer to attend the sessions. Some of these courses will be held at Ohio State university.

At the next meeting, which is scheduled for April 13, Hines expects to go into detail regarding the selections of air-raid wardens of her bicycle with a top covering of cord string keeping her prized hen in place. And if all goes well, in about three weeks this potpie hen, as we had thought, will be mothering a brood of dear little ones. Something different, is news, they say. Before the big push in the war gets under full speed so they can't get away, some of the local boys in camps here and there are calling in home while the coming is yet good. Richard Toole, son of William Toole of the electric shop, was home here for three days last week from a Carolina camp big enough to hold about 85,000 other ones besides himself. Plenty work along with good eats there, he says. Dick Wellington, too, was home for a couple of days from out in New Jersey. He is a telegrapher and his duties so far have not been very strenuous.

Anything out of the ordinary, unusual and different, they used to in past days, tell us was news. First martin, only one, the Spring advance agent, put in appearance Monday, March 16th, around at the Cooper bird and animal sanctuary about two weeks earlier than the usual time. There in a well kept pen are a number of ducks and an industrious one of the flock each morning deposits an egg for the caretaker, Mr. Cooper himself. But yesterday morning on his visit to the duck pen there was no egg. So he said to this lady bird: "Short changing me this morning, ain't you?" And in less time than it takes to tell about it, there was the egg. Can't make Mr. Cooper believe that that hen didn't exactly understand what he had said to her.

Another news one: A West Side school girl came out of Jesse Kalserman's poultry place Tuesday with what we sized up as a hen for potpie, but which proved all wrong. This biddy was most gently placed in the carrier basket

DANDELION RUBBER

THE American rubber problem continues to hold public interest, as our experts turn this way and that to find substitutes for the supply cut off by the loss of Malaysia and the East Indies. An interesting book might be written about the new schemes proposed. Apparently there are many possible substitutes which can be provided right here at home, when we once agree about it and get busy on the job.

One story tells of a rubber plant that will grow in this country and produce 800 pounds per acre, so cheaply that the product could be sold at three cents a pound. Another scheme proposes to solve the problem with a certain dandelion which grows in Russia near the Chinese border, and seeds of which would be imported and planted here in large quantities. It would produce 150 to 200 pounds of rubber per acre, and would be a beautiful sight when in bloom. Another substitute is said to be based on a process announced in Akron, O., the American "Rubber Capital," two years ago, and turned over to the Department of Agriculture.

It seems likely that we shall soon settle down experimentally to the cultivation of several such plants, with a view of making our country, the greatest rubber consumer, independent of the old sources. We can doubtless succeed, but hardly on a big scale in less than three or four years. In the meantime we shall be very rubber-hungry.

RIO BOILED

BRAZIL will make a good ally. It is now fully committed to war cooperation with the United States and is getting madder and madder at the brazen sinking of its ships by Axis foes. The outbursts of public indignation in Rio lately show that the Brazilians are in earnest about preserving their own freedom and that of their neighbors. Along with Mexico, now linked so self-respectingly with Uncle Sam, and the satellite nations that naturally stand with us, the western hemisphere seems assured of united defense all the way from Hudson Bay to Argentina. The absence of the last-named country from our Pan-American group is regrettable but not serious.

The attitude of Brazil is especially welcome because our two nations seem to understand and like each other and are able to cooperate. ## WORLD AT A GLANCE

Charles P. Stewart

THE LONGER the war lasts, within reason (it wouldn't be desirable to have it drag along everlastingly), the better it will be for Latin America, northward from approximately the Rio de la Plata mouth's latitude that is, inclusive of the southern republics' whole area, with the exception of lower Argentina and Chile, a region without natural resources very well worth much development.

The northerly stretch has been in abundance, subject to their cultivation, which they have not had hitherto, and they're just the kind that we need here in the United States, can't produce for ourselves and have imported, until the present conflict started, mostly from the Orient.

Rubber is one of 'em. How hard up we are for it, with our Dutch East Indian supply cut off, we all know. The trees grow wild, whole forests of 'em, up the Amazon valley, but a wild rubber tree doesn't ooze goo as copiously as one that's been domesticated, so the wild growth's domestication is among the developments required. Mean-time collection of the wild gum has started, even though it's skimpy in quantity; we need it so badly that we're glad to take what we can get.

However, to make 'em yield up to a maximum, the trees have got to be tamed, and a few days ago

Acting State Secretary Sumner Welles and Brazilian Finance Minister Arturo de Souza Costa closed a deal by which we grant a $100,000,000 credit to the Rio de Janeiro government for just that purpose, among other things.

It Takes Years

The difficulty is that it takes a matter of years to educate a rubber tree up to doing its full duty. The same thing's true of the development of other Latin American natural resources. Time's essential to complete the job. If it's accomplished, its result will be a tremendous asset to the developed countries. Yankee capital will be poured into 'em wholesale, a huge Yankee market will have been created for their output and they'll prosper up to the maximum limit. If the war ends prematurely, though, the probabilities are that we'll return to our old sources of supply and the Latin Americas' boom will have to wait indefinitely. Brazil is the republic that's due for the biggest expansion.

There are others whose products are in as great demand here as Brazil's are, but Brazil is so much larger than they are, all put together, that that'll be the whale among the minnows. The rest will be well fed minnows, but a minnow, even stuffed to the bursting point, can't reach a whale's proportions.

Brazil, be it borne in mind, has more room in it than the U. S. A. has, and it's potentially richer than we are—undeveloped, of course, but more than ready to start in on it.

This idea calls for a deal of rubbing in—into the United States. The 1914-18 war didn't last long

JESSE JONES ON GRILL

WASHINGTON—Secretary Jesse Jones was very wise in insisting that he be heard behind closed doors when he testified before the Senate Banking committee on the Murray bill to aid small business. The RFC czar ran into some hot grilling that would have made front page stories had reporters been allowed in.

Democratic Leader Alben Barkley and Senators Robert Taft of Ohio and James H. Hughes of Delaware supplied most of the fire-works, with charges that the RFC was giving speedy clearance on loans to big war contractors, while small firms begging for sub-contracts were cold-shouldered.

"The big fellow never has much trouble getting financing for a war order," Taft asserted, "but you will argue with the War or the Navy Department for a month about extending a loan to a little business man."

"I deny that, sir," replied Jones indignantly. "We will argue about ten minutes."

"The RFC always is raising the argument that loans to small business may not be repaid," retorted Taft. "Well, you make plenty of loans to big concerns with no more chance of repayment. I notice you loaned an airplane company $90,000,000. If the need for airplane engines should fall off, you will not get that back."

"The government is protected," parried Jones. "We will own the plant."

"Yes," shot back Taft. "That's the main thing you always think about, making or losing money. If you aren't aware of it, Mr. Jones, allow me to inform you that we are beyond that point. The big question that faces us now is winning the war. That's the only thing that counts."

THE RUN-AROUND

Jones hardly had time to recover from this panning when Hughes and Barkley began working out on him. The Delaware Senator bitterly criticized the "run-around" given little business by the RFC. "Under the present setup," Hughes said, "small business has to get a contract from the War or Navy Department before it can get a loan from you, and you will not grant the loan until it gets the contract."

"That's right," chimed in Barkley hotly. "And that's exactly why we need legislation like this bill for the little fellow. The RFC already is taking care of the big fellow. If a small business man tries to get a contract from the War Department and needs finances to carry out the contract, they tell him, 'We will let you have the contract if you can get an RFC loan.' Then he goes to the RFC and is told 'We will let you have the money if you can get the contract.'"

INFECTIONS of the skin occur in three different age periods: one is in infancy and is called impetigo; one is in adolescence and is the familiar acne or pimples.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

And the third, in old age, erysipelas. All these infections are due to the entrance into the skin of one of the pus organisms.

In the case of impetigo in children the real medical problem involved is prevention. It wouldn't be quite correct or fair to mothers to say that the reason babies get impetigo infection is that they are dirty, but somehow or other it is nearly correct and the hygiene of the care of a baby's skin is not sufficiently understood.

Chapping and skin irritations are usually the beginning of the trouble. A red, chafed skin is naturally a good breeding ground for germs, and around the diaper area this should be watched constantly. Mothers seem to think that it is very mysterious that an infection could get from the diaper area to the face, where the infection is usually at its worst. It isn't mysterious at all, it gets there by the baby's hands.

Antiseptic Powder

For this reason the toilet of the baby's skin all over, from the bath to the use of an antiseptic powder and sometimes antiseptic oils, if the baby's skin responds well to that, should be a regular part of infant hygiene, especially in summer and early spring. With excessive sweating and acid perspiration, the toilet of the skin and the use of antiseptic powder is very valuable.

If a sporadic case of impetigo has occurred, the treatment is, in the first place, to see that it doesn't spread. This means that the baby's hands, shirts, crib pads and blankets should be disinfected. The mother's or nurse's hands, while handling the baby, should also be disinfected. The baby's hands should be protected so that they can not get at the infected spots and spread the infection to other parts of the skin.

Visitor control: There should be two visitors at a time only. No child visitors should be allowed in the nursery. Of course various antiseptic lotions and ointments are used to control the infection and bring the inflammation of the skin back to normal.

No Minor Matter

The important thing to remember is that impetigo, or a little infection on the baby's skin is not a minor matter, but should be handled like a full-blown infectious fever.

In the case of the skin infection or adolescence, acne, there is some question as to whether it is an infectious disease of the skin. One thing is certain; no one ever caught acne from another person and it is seldom spread by the hands from the face and neck area. It is an indolent disease, there is probably a good deal of chemical or metabolic change in the body which accounts for it. For this reason a low fat diet has proved to be quite beneficial and sometimes cures cases without any other treatment. This can be initiated in any home but demands the utmost in watchfulness and intelligent preparation of the diet. The people who do not follow the diet are the people who get worse.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. E. R.: "What causes the gall bladder to act up? Is there any special diet, or omission of any food that will make it behave?"

Answer: The gall bladder gets the drainage from all the poisons of the liver and the liver gets all the poisons from the bowels, so it is no wonder that occasionally the gall bladder "acts up." Fat in the diet causes the gall bladder to contract, so it is probably better to eat a very light, lean diet consisting of lean meats, vegetables cooked without butter or gravy, raw fruits and clear soups. Especially eat lightly for a while.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

AS DAYS crowded into weeks and brought the opening of "The Violent Flame" perilously near, Anette wondered more and more just how she was going to live up to her foolishly vaunted statement that she fought her own battles, animosity such as Lance Ericsson felt for her, animosity he did not even bother to conceal, could not be handled easily.

Long after the publicity concerning her marriage to the matinee idol, Peyton, had been completely exhausted, Ericsson remained resentful. It meant nothing to him that some writers, instead of following the kindly precedent of Ralph Hay, had attacked with insolence the sudden marriage and equally sudden separation, as they chose to call it. It meant nothing to Ericsson that the girl had been far more embarrassed than pleased. It was newspaper mention and it infuriated him.

Added to his mistreatment was the verbal abuse of his strong ally, the stage director. Anette was hard put to withstand their combined determination to freeze her from the cast, and yet she knew if she actually warranted the directors' condemnation, that Bradford and Seymour would have ousted her long ago.

She came home from dress rehearsal a little after midnight, so unbelievably weary that she sank into a chair without removing her hat and coat. Soft, unusually warm, April breezes came through the open windows. There were rich, yellow jonquils from Larry in a white vase on the table beside her. She realized that, during those weeks of torturous work, spring had arrived. But what difference did it make? She was not light-hearted and gay in keeping with the time of the year. She was nervous, frightened and so lonely for Larry that she felt physically ill. However, when his call came, she managed to smother all gloom and make her usual cheerful reply, "Fine!" in return to his usual question, "How's everything?"

"I saw your picture in the magazine with Lance Ericsson." "Umm," Anette mumbled. "Benefit appearance for some institution. We did a short scene."

Larry said in a tone that held a slight trace of jealousy, "Looked mighty chummy."

"Ha!" shouted his wife. "Don't be funny. The man hates me!" Larry said, chuckling, "That's fine. That's very fine indeed. I was afraid he might fall in love with you." The import of her remark suddenly jabbed him. "Say! He's treating you all right, isn't he?"

Here was her chance. Her lovely opportunity to relate in detail everything Lance Ericsson had done, was doing and might do. She opened her mouth widely and took a deep breath, only to say, "Yes, he's treating me fine."

"He'd darned well better! Now, darling, since you're opening on Saturday I can't make it. I don't want to leave August alone for both matinee and night performance. But I'll be there Sunday and stay until Tuesday."

No sooner had Anette replaced the receiver than the telephone rang a second time. It was August, asking the identical question, "How's everything?"

Through her astonishment, the girl gave the same answer that she invariably gave Larry and raced on into a chattering recitation. "I like the part very much. It's fun being the wicked other woman who breaks up the real lovers. Of course I get punished, but that's fun, too. The audience changes from hate to love when I begin to weep and get pushed around—and I do wean, pushed around."

August Drake put in quickly, "By Lance Ericsson?"

For one horrified instant the girl was silent. "No—he's not bad."

"Then he has reformed mightily," said the flame-haired actress. "Or does 'Not bad' mean he hasn't yet hit you over the head with a sledge hammer?"

All of a sudden, Anette knew. This was the person to whom she could confess Ericsson's ill treatment. Not Bradford and Seymour. Not Verrazano. Not even Larry. But, inexplicably, August Drake. She began to talk and August listened. Then August talked and Anette listened. When she finally hung up the receiver she saw the conversation had taken exactly 27 minutes.

Although she did not make her entrance until very near the end of the first act, Anette was dressed, fully made up and waiting in the wings before the two principals had emerged from their dressing rooms. She was thankful for the tremendous skirt of her costume, and its several starched embroidered petticoats that hid her trembling legs.

Jane Hubert strolled from her stage-level dressing room, very lovely in soft yellow chiffon. She gave Anette a vacant, balmy-eyed stare and said vaguely, "Good luck, dear."

Immediately after, Lance Ericsson walked across the dingy boards. Through her dislike Anette found herself admiring the striking figure he made in the colorful uniform he wore in the first act. If I didn't really know him, she thought, if I were out front, I'd be quite impressed.

His brow tightened as he took in her costume. "Will you please tell me why you are got-up like a baby's crib? Why do you think the director and I spent hours planning that green dress for you?"

"I've a pretty good idea," she told him coldly. "In the first place there is no worse color for the stage than green. But I didn't find that out until last night. I decided I'd have to change in a hurry and I'm so fond of this rose dress with its white starched ruffles and fancy petticoats that I don't intend to change again."

"But it's taffeta!" Lance roared, slashing the air with a finger-waving hand. "It will make too much noise."

"Not unless I'm provoked," she told him sweetly.

"What do you mean, 'provoked'?" Just what do you think you're doing?" He moved nearer and abruptly forgot the costume. "Have you been eating garlic?" he demanded.

"Why, yes?" The girl's topaz eyes were as roundly innocent and un-revealing as if they were real stones. "You did so often during rehearsals that I assumed it was all right." She bit her lips against a smile as Lance Ericsson stalked away without further words.

After the first few minutes on the stage, Anette found herself not thinking of Lance Ericsson and his deceit. Her knees had quit shaking. Her lines and every bit of accompanying business were clear in her mind. Best of all, she felt the audience sweeping along with her.

And then he began. During the first love scene, during the impetuous and tempestuous moments before he was to sweep the irresistible, but heartless Ninetta into his arms. Gradually, but so surely, Lance Ericsson swerved backward, until the girl, turning to face him, was also facing a backdrop of trees, mountains and Tyrolean rooftops.

The star was jubilant. He bent his head to kiss her, intending to turn her slightly to one side and exhibit his profile; but Anette stepped squarely in front of him, stood on tiptoe and put her arms so far around his neck that the fluted white organdy ruffle at the top of her bodice covered his face. The huge rose taffeta skirt hid the magnificence of gold braid, bright wool and a sabel.

True, there was nothing visible but Anette's back, but Lance Ericsson was practically non-existent, except for his hands around the girl's gypsy-corseted waist. She let him force her to one side, for the pantomimed whispers that followed the first kiss, the endearments that must appear too sweet to be spoken aloud. But Anette really whispered, "If you trip me, I'll faint, and I'll stay flat on the floor and let you work your way out of it alone. So unless you want to do a monologue, don't trip me!" They kissed the second time and the audience gasped at the fiery romance of the scene.

Anette knew enough to keep her distance when Ericsson was off stage. She hovered near the electricians, even freshened her make-up right there, using a hand mirror and makeshift materials from a little pasteboard box.

In the last act, when Lance Ericsson said, "This is the last time I'll get to hold you in my arms," Anette felt his hand against her waist and knew, "He's going to tickle me, just as he did at rehearsal and make me look ridiculous in this scene of anguished sobbing." Her tear-flooded eyes looked up into his and she moved closer into his hold. Very gently she placed her hand over her own arm, and with a spasmodic pressure that appeared to be intense devotion, clamped down all impudence his hand against her ribs.

Too good a trouper to make himself look ridiculous, Ericsson gritted his teeth. Anette eased her hold after several seconds, swept into his arms for the goodby scene of unbearable heart pangs. The audience wept. Anette exited. Jane Hubert joined Lance for the happy ending. And the show was over.

After bows, the leading man rushed toward Anette. "You little devil, look what you did to my fingers. What did you have inside your sash?"

She pulled a big but very thin pin cushion from her gypsy corset. "Isn't that a silly thing to have in there, especially with the pins headed the wrong way? An antidote for your throat-slashing technique; and say, if you are not satisfied, why don't you squeal to Bradford and Seymour?"

"Why, I ought to slap you so hard you'd see stars!"

Someone said, "Looking for trouble, buddy?"

Anette swung around. So did Lance Ericsson. There stood Jenks, the cab driver.

DANDELION RUBBER

THE American rubber problem continues to hold public interest, as our experts turn this way and that to find substitutes for the supply cut off by the loss of Malaysia and the East Indies. An interesting book might be written about the new schemes proposed. Apparently there are many possible substitutes which can be provided right here at home, when we once agree about it and get busy on the job.

One story tells of a rubber plant that will grow in this country and produce 800 pounds per acre, so cheaply that the product could be sold at three cents a pound. Another scheme proposes to solve the problem with a certain dandelion which grows in Russia near the Chinese border, and seeds of which would be imported and planted here in large quantities. It would produce 150 to 200 pounds of rubber per acre, and would be a beautiful sight when in bloom. Another substitute is said to be based on a process announced in Akron, O., the American "Rubber Capital," two years ago, and turned over to the Department of Agriculture.

It seems likely that we shall soon settle down experimentally to the cultivation of several such plants, with a view of making our country, the greatest rubber consumer, independent of the old sources. We can doubtless succeed, but hardly on a big scale in less than three or four years. In the meantime we shall be very rubber-hungry.

Along with Mexico, now linked so self-respectingly with Uncle Sam, and the satellite nations that naturally stand with us, the western hemisphere seems assured of united defense all the way from Hudson Bay to Argentina. The absence of the last-named country from our Pan-American group is regrettable but not serious.

The attitude of Brazil is especially welcome because our two nations seem to understand and like each other and are able to cooperate. The northern stretch has them in abundance, and subject to their cultivation, which they just not had hitherto, and they're just the kind that we need here in the United States, can produce for ourselves and have imported, until the present conflict started, mostly from the Orient.

Rubber is one of 'em. How hard up we are for it, with our Dutch East Indian supply cut off, we all know. The trees grow wild, whole forests of 'em, up the Amazon valley, but a wild rubber tree doesn't come up as copiously as one that's been domesticated, so the wild growth's domestication is among the developments required. Mean time collection of the wild gum has started, even though it's skimpy in quantity; we need it so badly that we're glad to take what we can get.

However, to make 'em yield up to a maximum, the trees have got to be tamed, and a few days ago

Acting State Secretary Sumner Welles and Brazilian Finance Minister Artur de Souza Costa closed a deal by which we grant a $100,000,000 credit to the Rio de Janeiro government for just that purpose, among other things.

The difficulty is that it takes a matter of years to educate a rubber tree up to doing its full duty.

The same thing's true of the development of other Latin American natural resources. Time's essential to complete the job. If it's accomplished, its result will be a tremendous asset to the developed countries. Yankee capital will be poured into 'em wholesale, a huge Yankee market will have been created for their output and they'll prosper up to the maximum limit.

If the war ends prematurely, though, the probabilities are that we'll return to our old sources of supply and the Latin America's boom will have to wait indefinitely. Brazil is the republic that's due for the biggest expansion.

In the case of impetigo in children the real medical problem involved is prevention. It wouldn't be quite correct or fair to mothers to say that the reason babies get impetigo infection is that they are dirty, but somehow or other it is nearly correct and the hygiene of the care of a baby's skin is not sufficiently understood.

Chapping and skin irritations are usually the beginning of the trouble. A red, chafed skin is naturally a good breeding ground for germs, and around the diaper area this should be watched constantly. Mothers seem to think that it is very mysterious that an infection could get from the diaper area to the face, where the infection is usually at its worst. It isn't mysterious at all, it gets there by the baby's hands.

Antiseptic Powder

For this reason the toilet of the baby's skin all over, from the bath to the use of an antiseptic powder and sometimes antiseptic oils, if the baby's skin responds well to that, should be a regular part of infant hygiene, especially in summer and early spring. With excessive sweating and acid perspiration, the toilet of the skin and the use of antiseptic powder is very valuable.

If a sporadic case of impetigo has occurred, the treatment is, in the first place to see that it doesn't spread. This means that the baby's hands, shirts, crib pads and blankets should be disinfected. The mother's or nurse's hands, while handling the baby, should also be disinfected. The baby's hands should be protected so that they can't get at the infected spots and spread the infection to other parts of the skin.

Visitor control: There should be two visitors at a time only. No child visitors should be allowed in the nursery. Of course various antiseptic lotions and ointments are used to control the infection and bring the inflammation of the skin back to normal.

No Minor Matter
The important thing to remember is that impetigo, or a little infection on the baby's skin is not a minor matter, but should be handled like a full-blown infectious fever.

Rubber May Do It
Perhaps the rubber shortage will do the business.

Last time we weren't pinched for the stuff as on today's occasion. We continued to get it from the East Indies and we didn't have so many autos, either. As of to date, it's a more painful famine than that. An underfed citizen pulls in his belt, but let an autoist be told that he's got to stop hitting pedestrians!

Anyway, rubber is what we're worrying about especially. Co-ordinator Nelson Rockefeller of Inter-American Affairs has just dispatched tropical medical specialists to the Amazon valley rubber region to adopt defensive measures against disease-bearing germs that prey on collectors of the gum in the wild rubber region.

Right now wild rubber is what we're in quest of. Tame rubber will come as fast as we're able to tame it.

There's been quite some talk about synthetic rubber. The synthetic brand evidently doesn't fill the bill more than semi-satisfactorily. The genuine gum is what we need for military purposes. The synthetic dope doesn't even satisfy pleasure-drivers. Evidently it misuses too many pedestrians.

In the case of the skin infection or adolescence, acne, there is some question as to whether it is an infectious disease of the skin. One thing is certain; no one ever caught acne from another person and it is seldom spread by the hands from the face and neck area.

It is an indolent disease, there is probably a good deal of chemical or metabolic change in the body which accounts for it. For this reason a low fat diet has proved to be quite beneficial and sometimes cures cases without any other treatment. This can be initiated in any home but demands the utmost in watchfulness and intelligent preparation of the diet. The people who do not follow the diet are the people who get worse.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. E. R.: "What causes the gall bladder to act up? Is there any special diet, or omission of any food that will make it behave?"

Answer: The gall bladder gets the drainage from all the poisons of the liver and the liver gets all the poisons from the bowels, so it is no wonder that occasionally the gall bladder "acts up." Fat in the diet causes the gall bladder to contract, so it is probably better to eat a very light, lean diet consisting of lean meats, vegetables cooked without butter or gravy, raw fruits and clear soups. Especially eat lightly for a while.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

AS DAYS crowded into weeks and brought the opening of "The Violent Flame" perilously near, Anette wondered more and more just how she was going to live up to her foolishly vaunted statement that she fought her own battles. Amosity such as Lance Erickson felt for her, amosity he did not even bother to conceal, could not be handled easily.

Long after the publicity concerning her marriage to the matinee idol, Peyton, had been completely exhausted, Erickson remained resentful. It meant nothing to him that some writers, instead of following the kindly precedent of Ralph Hay, had attacked with insolence the sudden marriage and equally sudden separation, as they chose to call it. It meant nothing to Erickson that the girl had been far more embarrassed than pleased. It was newspaper mention and it infuriated him.

Added to his mistreatment was the verbal abuse of his strong ally, the stage director. Anette was hard put to withstand their combined determination to freeze her from the cast, and yet she knew if she actually warranted the directors' condemnation, that Bradford and Seymour would have ousted her long ago.

She came home from dress rehearsal a little after midnight, so unbelievably weary that she sank into a chair without removing her hat and coat. Soft, unusually warm, April breezes came through the open windows. There were rich, yellow jonquils from Larry in a white vase on the table beside her. She realized that, during those weeks of torturous work, spring had arrived. But what difference did it make? She was not light-hearted and gay in keeping with the time of the year. She was nervous, frightened and so lonely for Larry that she felt physically ill.

However, when his call came, she managed to smother all gloom and make her usual cheerful reply. "Fine!" in return to his usual question, "How's everything?"

"I saw your picture in the magazine with Lance Erickson."

"Umm," Anette mumbled. "Benefit appearance for some institution. We did a short scene."

Larry said in a tone that held a slight trace of jealousy, "Looked mighty chummy."

"Ha!" shouted his wife. "Don't be funny. The man hates me!"

Larry said, chuckling, "That's fine. That's very fine indeed. I was afraid he might fall in love with you." The import of her remark suddenly jabbed him. "Say! He's treating you all right, isn't he?"

Here was her chance. Her lovely opportunity to relate in detail everything Lance Erickson had done, was doing and might do. She opened her mouth widely and took a deep breath, only to say, "Yes, he's treating me fine."

"He'd darned well better! Now, darling, since you're opening on Saturday I can't make it. I don't want to leave August alone for both matinee and night performances. But I'll be there Sunday and stay until Tuesday."

No sooner had Anette replaced the receiver than the telephone rang a second time. It was August, asking the identical question, "How's everything?"

Through her astonishment, the girl gave the same answer that she invariably gave Larry and raced on into a chattering recitation. "I like the part very much. It's fun being the wicked other woman who breaks up the real lovers. Of course I get punished, but that's fun, too. The audience changes from hate to love when I begin to weep and get pushed around—and I do weep, pushed around."

August Drake put in quickly, "By Lance Erickson?"

For one horrified instant the girl was silent. "No—he's not bad."

"Then he has reformed mightily," said the flame-haired actress. "Or does 'Not bad' mean he hasn't yet hit you over the head with a sledge hammer?"

All of a sudden, Anette knew. This was the person to whom she could confess Erickson's ill treatment. Not Bradford and Seymour. Not Verrazano. Not even Larry. But, inexplicably, August Drake. She began to talk and August listened. Then August talked and Anette listened. When she finally hung up the receiver she saw the conversation had taken exactly 27 minutes.

Although she did not make her entrance until very near the end of the first act, Anette was dressed, fully made up and waiting in the wings before the two principals had emerged from their dressing rooms. She was thankful for the tremendous skirt of her costume, and its several starched embroidered petticoats that hid her trembling legs.

Jane Hubert strolled from her stage-level dressing room, very lovely in soft yellow chiffon. She gave Anette a vacant, balmy-eyed stare and said vaguely, "Good luck, dear."

Immediately after, Lance Erickson walked across the dirty boards. Through her dislike Anette found herself admiring the striking figure he made in the colorful uniform he wore in the first act. If I didn't really know him, she thought, if I were out front, I'd be quite impressed.

His brow tightened as he took in her costume. "Will you please tell me why you are got-up like a baby's crib? Why do you think the director and I spent hours planning that green dress for you?"

"I've a pretty good idea," she told him coldly. "In the first place there is no worse color to the stage than green. But I didn't find that out until last night. I decided I'd have to change in a hurry and I'm so fond of this rose dress with its white starched ruffles and fancy petticoats that I don't intend to change again."

"But it's tawdry!" Lance roared, slashing the air with a finger-waving hand. "It will make too much noise."

"Not unless I'm provoked," she told him sweetly.

"What do you mean, 'provoked'?" Just what do you think you're doing?" He moved nearer and abruptly forgot the costume. "Have you been eating garlic?" he demanded.

"Why, yes." The girl's topaz eyes were as roundly innocent and un-revealing as if they were real stones. "You did so often during rehearsals that I assumed it was all right." She bit her lips against a smile as Lance Erickson stalked away without further words.

After the first few minutes on the stage, Anette found herself not thinking of Lance Erickson and his deceit. Her knees had quit shaking. Her lines and every bit of accompanying business were clear in her mind. Best of all, she felt the audience sweeping along with her.

And then he began. During the first love scene, during the impetuous and tempestuous moments before he was to sweep the irresistible, but heartily Ninetta into his arms. Gradually, but so surely, Lance Erickson served back him, until the girl, turning to face him, was also facing a backdrop of trees, mountains and Tyrolean rooftops.

The star was jubilant. He bent his head to kiss her, intending to turn her slightly to one side and exhibit his profile; but Anette stepped squarely in front of him, stood on tiptoe and put her arms so far around his neck that the fluted white argandy ruffle at the top of her bodice covered his face. The huge rose taffeta skirt hid the magnificence of gold braid, bright wool and a sash.

True, there was nothing visible but Anette's back, but Lance Erickson was practically non-existent, except for his hands around the girl's gypsy-embroidered waist. She let him force her to one side, for the pantomimed whispers that followed the first kiss, the endearments that must appear too sweet to be spoken aloud. But Anette really whispered. "If you trip me, I'll faint, and I'll stay flat on the floor and let you work your way out of it alone. So unless you want to do a monologue, don't trip me!" They kissed the second time and the audience gasped at the fiery romance of the scene.

Anette knew enough to keep her distance when Erickson was off stage. She hovered near the electricians, even freshened her make-up right there, using a hand mirror and makeup materials from a little pasteboard box.

In the last act, when Lance Erickson said, "This is the last time I'll get to hold you in my arms," Anette felt his hand against her waist and knew, "He's going to tickle me, just as he did at rehearsal and make me look ridiculous in this scene of anguished sobbing." Her tear-flooded eyes looked up into his and she moved closer into his hold. Very gently she placed her hand over her own arm, and with a spasmodic pressure that appeared to be intense devotion, clamped down as if imprisoned his hand against her ribs.

Too good a trouper to make himself look ridiculous, Erickson gritted his teeth. Anette eased her hold after several seconds, swept into his arms for the goodbye scene of unbearable heart pangs. The audience wept. Anette exited. Jane Hubert joined Lance for the happy ending. And the show was over.

After bows, the leading man rushed toward Anette. "You little devil, look what you did to my fingers. What did you have inside your sash?"

She pulled a big but very thin pin cushion from her gypsy corset. "Isn't that a silly thing to have in there, especially with the pins headed the wrong way? An antidote for your throat-slashing technique; and say, if you are not satisfied, why don't you squeal to Bradford and Seymour?"

"Why, I ought to slap you so hard you'd see stars!"

Someone said, "Looking for trouble, buddy?"

Anette swung around. So did Lance Erickson. There stood Jenks, the cab driver.

D. A. R.
Mrs. W. T. Ulm was heard in a splendid review of the book, "Captain Paul", by Edward Elsborg, at the meeting of Pickaway Plains chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Harry D. Jackson of North Scioto street.

The book concerned the many disappointments in the life of Captain John Paul Jones, a naval hero of Revolutionary War times but one receiving little honor and appreciation for his exploits from his countrymen.

The story of his life is told by one of his friends, a young man of Nantucket, who met him in 1774. Born in Scotland, Captain Paul had a varied career, running away to sea when he was 12 and later serving in the British navy. After coming to America he served through the Revolutionary War in the small navy where he first was commissioned a fifth lieutenant, later, through jealousy being reduced to the eighteenth place in the ranks.

Mrs. Ulm gave a thoughtful story of his life and of his struggle to gain command of a decent ship in the navy; told of his being considered a pirate and buccaneer and of his disappointment in love, and reviewed his varying fortunes until his death at 45.

Mrs. Ulm's review was well received by 35 members and guests. Mrs. James P. Moffitt, regent, conducted the opening ceremonies and the short business meeting.

D. A. R.

Mrs. W. T. Ulm was heard in a splendid review of the book, "Captain Paul," by Edward Elsborg, at the meeting of Pickaway Plains chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Harry D. Jackson of North Scioto street.

The book concerned the many disappointments in the life of Captain John Paul Jones, a naval hero of Revolutionary War times but one receiving little honor and appreciation for his exploits from his countrymen.

The story of his life is told by one of his friends, a young man of Nantucket, who met him in 1774. Born in Scotland, Captain Paul had a varied career, running away to sea when he was 12 and later serving in the British navy. After coming to America he served through the Revolutionary War in the small navy where he first was commissioned a fifth lieutenant, later, through jealousy being reduced to the eighteenth place in the ranks.

Mrs. Ulm gave a thoughtful story of his life and of his struggle to gain command of a decent ship in the navy; told of his being considered a pirate and buccaneer and of his disappointment in love, and reviewed his varying fortunes until his death at 45.

Mrs. Ulm's review was well received by 35 members and guests. Mrs. James P. Moffitt, regent, conducted the opening ceremonies and the short business meeting.

She spoke of patriotism in children being fostered by the teaching of the daily salute to the flag and by the teaching of obedience to the laws of each community and, in closing, urged that the people of today measure up to the standards of the leaders of the past.

First 'Hot Shot' Bowling Teams To Invade Alleys

COLUMBUS, March 18—"Anything can happen, now," was the cry that pervaded the alleys of the 42nd annual American Bowling Congress championships here today as the first of the nation's "hot-shot" teams—the Chicago Budweisers—were slated to make their debut.

With plenty of room at the top of the standings in all divisions, predictions as to the "Buds" final score ranged from 2,700 to 3,100, but if precedent is any criterion, the former mark seems the more likely as tournament alleys have become one after another of the name squads in the past.

Slated to take to the alleys following two shifts of booster teams, the Budweisers along with 35 other high average quintets are expected to bring to a close the scoring lull which invaded Tuesday's session as six shifts failed to produce a leadership change for the first time in a week.

Adding impetus to predictions of an exceptionally high score today was the last session of minor events which, although barren of contending tallies, did result in high individual games as a trio of Cincinnatians "blew" excellent chances to assume command in the singles division.

Walter Fensch opened with a terrific 255 and followed with 208 but slipped to 170 in the finale after needing a 230 to take the lead. Similarly, Charley Dawes skidded from a 243 over to 203 and 196 for 642 while Ed Beringer had 231-202-209—642.

Boasting a 1035 average and the ninth highest total recorded this year—3374—Budweisers will cross alleys with another title contender—the Burlington Zephyrs, also of Chicago, who average an even 1000.

A few alleys away are two of Cleveland's strongest threats to the crown now worn by the Vogel Brothers squad of Forest Park, Ill.—Varga Crystal Rocks and Craddock Motors, both with 980 averages for the season.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 18—On the strong right arm of Ray Poat may rest the first division hopes of the Cleveland Indians, Manager Lou Boudreau had reason to believe today, as the Three-I league rookies turned back the heavy-hitting St. Louis Cardinals for five innings with only one safe blow. The Cards won a nine-inning, 1-0, victory as each club collected four hits.

Max Lanier and John Beazley, Card flingers, were almost as stingy as Poat. Lanier gave up two hits in five frames and Beazley two in four.

Walker Cooper, St. Louis catcher, cracked in the lone run of the game in the ninth with a sizzling single through Oscar Grimes' legs at third base, scoring Erv Duska from second base.

Senior C. of C. To Put Approval On Junior Unit

Meeting To Be Planned Next Week To Work Out Details

If Circleville's young men are sincerely interested in organizing a Junior Chamber of Commerce they will receive the full support of the Senior Chamber.

Senior members, at a meeting held Tuesday evening, generally expressed the opinion that such an organization could be an asset to Circleville and they voted to call the young men together next Tuesday night for a final decision on the matter. At the meeting beginning at 6:15, directors will discuss the problem thoroughly with the young men.

After the program of the Junior Chamber had been outlined by George Cammann, Portsmouth, national vice-president of the Junior organization, Chamber members instructed President A. V. Osborn to call a joint meeting of the board of directors with the young men next Tuesday night.

Purpose of the meeting, according to Chamber members, is to clear up certain "misunderstandings" which might cause friction between the two organizations. If a mutual understanding can be reached and the younger men show a desire to form an organization of their own, it was the general opinion of the senior members that such an organization should be formed.

Functions Outlined

Mr. Cammann was presented to Chamber of Commerce members by Robert Dresbach, president of the Chillicothe Junior Chamber. The national vice-president outlined the various functions and programs which are being carried out by the Junior chambers. Americanism and Christmas programs, work with 4-H clubs and rural young people, public health and public safety programs are among the activities, he said.

The Junior Chamber is formed from young men between 21 and 35 years old. Its duties are to train young men in leadership by working with civic affairs. The organization supplements rather than takes the place of the senior organization.

A discussion followed Mr. Cammann's talk with several young men interested in forming a Junior Chamber taking part. Robert Hemphker, chairman of the young men's group, told Chamber members that he would contact the young men and have them at the meeting next Tuesday night.

Also taking part in the discussion was William (Billy) Mills, secretary of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce. John Stitt, secretary of the Chillicothe Junior chamber, also was present.

Reports of Chamber committees were given at Tuesday night's meeting. F. K. Blair, county agricultural agent and chairman of the agricultural committee, gave a report on the recent Corn and Soybean show, which the Chamber sponsored. Following his report members of the organization voted to sponsor the show again next year.

CHILLICOTHE, March 18 — Importance of Route 23 as a strategic military highway may lead to a bridge improvement project over the Scioto river at Bridge street.

400 Attend St. Joseph's Huge Event

Remodeled School Building Opened To Public For First Time

St. Joseph's Catholic church opened its remodeled school building Tuesday evening for the Circleville public, and more than 400 persons passed in and out of the structure during the evening. Many were heard to express surprise at the success of the remodeling job, which makes the building, abandoned as a school some years ago, an excellent one.

The church plans to use the building for recreational purposes, Father Edward Reidy to administer the use of the various rooms. Numerous persons visited the building to see what had been done during the $10,000 remodeling program, while others remained to play cards, to dance, to see motion pictures and to enjoy a light lunch being served during the evening.

Many youngsters of school age enjoyed games of euchre, rum, hearts and others in a spacious room just to the right of the entrance, which is on West Mound street. Motion pictures were shown in a room just across the hall. On the second floor, dancing was conducted with a 'juke' box being used, and the lunch was also served on this floor.

Members of the Altar Society and Holy Name Society, and Father Reidy, served as hostesses and hosts during the evening. The rooms of the building will be available for various public gatherings, Father Reidy said. "We have felt that Circleville needs a recreation center," he declared, "and we feel quite proud of our remodeled building." That it will be used was indicated when Father Reidy said that a group of youngsters had asked permission to use one of the rooms Friday and Saturday evenings.

tion, which sets up a special division for small business under the War Production Board, with power to make loans and assist the little fellow in getting contracts, is the answer. The record shows that small business is getting little, if any, help from the RFC.

MORE RFC STALLING

Latest case of RFC penny-pinching stalling of a vital defense contract that has come to the committee's attention and aroused hot indignation is that of the Northern Pump Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

The largest maker of Navy ordnance in the country, the concern has an excellent financial and business record. In the last few years it has grown from 1,000 to 6,000 employees and now has over $100,000,000 in Navy orders.

Last year the company was given a $23,000,000 Navy contract for some urgently needed ordnance. To finance this rush order the firm asked the RFC for a $3,000,000 loan.

After weeks of time-marking the RFC finally offered to lend $1,000,000 provided the company put up more than $2,000,000 in assets, its valuable patent rights, and notes signed personally by its executives.

In other words, despite the fact that the company had a $23,000,000 Navy ordinance order, which the Navy was clamoring for, Jesse Jones' RFC would not lend the concern more than $1,000,000 to fill this contract—and even then only if the company signed away its eye-teeth.

When the company executives protested this tight-fistedness, they were snapped off with, "We are running a bank, not a defense agency."

Finally, despairing of getting any RFC help, the concern, through the intervention of another government agency, got it from the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank. Within 24 hours after applying for a loan the bank gave the company unlimited credit.

But in the meanwhile three months of priceless time had been lost because of the RFC's money-grubbing obstructionism.

TRAVEL-HOGS

During the noisy House battle over the Agriculture Department appropriation bill, hot words were hurled at a travel allowance item. It was charged that extravagance and waste were rife in government travel expenditures.

That is absolutely true. And what is equally true—though no mention of it was made in the House—is that the worst travel-boondoggling offender in the entire government is Congress.

The country rose in arms over the attempted congressional pension grab, which would have cost taxpayers around $100,000 a year. But what is not realized is that for years Congress has been tapping the treasury for a sum nearly twice that amount, $171,000 a year, in the form of a travel allowance.

Under this neat till-raiding scheme, every member of Congress gets a check for one round trip a year from his home to Washington at the rate of 20 cents a mile—regardless of whether the trip is made or not.

Further, Congress voted that it be paid this juicy tidbit in advance.

So every January, at the beginning of a session, the boys go down to the cashier's window and draw in advance their year's travel grab at the rate of 20 cents a mile to and from their homes.

Two of the loudest denouncers of the travel fund item in the Agriculture bill were Representative Everett Dirksen, bushy-haired Illinoisan, and Representative Mike Monroney, gangling Oklahoman. Dirksen's travel "take" this year was $396 and Monroney's $571.

Neither has said a word or lifted a finger to put an end to their own travel-boondoggling.

Certain members of Congress are very hot for economy—except when it hits their own pockets.

MORE RFC STALLING

Latest case of RFC penny-pinching stalling of a vital defense contract that has come to the committee's attention and aroused hot indignation is that of the Northern Pump Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

The largest maker of Navy ordnance in the country, the concern has an excellent financial and business record. In the last few years it has grown from 1,000 to 6,000 employees and now has over $100,000,000 in Navy orders.

Last year the company was given a $23,000,000 Navy contract for some urgently needed ordnance. To finance this rush order the firm asked the RFC for a $3,000,000 loan.

After weeks of time-marking the RFC finally offered to lend $1,000,000 provided the company put up more than $2,000,000 in assets, its valuable patent rights, and notes signed personally by its executives.

In other words, despite the fact that the company had a $23,000,000 Navy ordnance order, which the Navy was clamoring for, Jesse Jones' RFC would not lend the concern more than $1,000,000 to fill this contract—and even then only if the company signed away its eye-teeth.

When the company executives protested this tight-fistedness, they were snapped off with, "We are running a bank, not a defense agency."

Finally, despairing of getting any RFC help, the concern, through the intervention of another government agency, got it from the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank. Within 24 hours after applying for a loan the bank gave the company unlimited credit.

But in the meanwhile three months of priceless time had been lost because of the RFC's money-grubbing obstructionism.

TRAVEL-HOGS

During the noisy House battle over the Agriculture Department appropriation bill, hot words were hurled at a travel allowance item. It was charged that extravagance and waste were rife in government travel expenditures.

That is absolutely true. And what is equally true—though no mention of it was made in the House—is that the worst travel-bodding offender in the entire government is Congress.

The country rose in arms over the attempted congressional pension grab, which would have cost taxpayers around $100,000 a year. But what is not realized is that for years Congress has been tapping the treasury for a sum nearly twice that amount, $171,000 a year, in the form of a travel allowance.

Under this neat till-raiding scheme, every member of Congress gets a check for one round trip a year from his home to Washington at the rate of 20 cents a mile—regardless of whether the trip is made or not.

Further, Congress voted that it be paid this juicy tidbit in advance.

So every January, at the beginning of a session, the boys go down to the cashier's window and draw in advance their year's travel grab at the rate of 20 cents a mile to and from their homes.

Two of the loudest denouncers of the travel fund item in the Agricultural bill were Representative Everett Dirksen, bushy-haired Illinoisian, and Representative Mike Monroney, gangling Oklahoman. Dirksen's travel "take" this year was $396 and Monroney's $571.

Neither has said a word or lifted a finger to put an end to their own travel-bodding.

Certain members of Congress are very hot for economy—except when it hits their own pockets.

Guy W. Mathewson of Columbus, who is serving time at the London prison farm for obtaining money under false pretenses, will be freed on parole March, 1943, unless Sheriff Charles Radcliff of Pickaway county wants him on another charge. In that case he would be released June 1 to the local sheriff.

The sheriff said Wednesday that Mathewson has been indicted here on information concerning fraud, but that he believed the indictment to be a mistake since the man who filed charges against Mathewson had failed to identify him when he confronted the prisoner at the prison farm.
